Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

"BEFORE recovery we must have discovery." Here's a story that may mean millions to the South's cotton farmers—flour made out of the kernel of the cottonseed.

In 1926, so a letter from the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce tells me, T. J. Harrell, past president of the Texas Cottonseed Crushers association, picked up the flour-from-cottonseed idea. It wasn't a new idea. Others had worked on it for 30 years.

Harrell didn't do much about it—until the depression cracked down on his own markets.

He took a young chemist, C. W. McMath, out of Texas A. & M. and placed him in his mill. That was in 1932.

A year and a half later McMath had produced by laboratory methods a palatable flour, light tan in color, which won the approval of the American Medical association's committee on foods.

Harrell then came back into the picture, invested $150,000 in machinery, and put this new flour into commercial production.

It will, of course, have to fight its own way in the competitive markets of the world—but every Southern cotton man, whether producer or handler, wishes it well.

Cotton has been vastly helped in this machine age. Automobile tires came along to replace the lost staple demand when women went to wearing silks and rayons. Now, perhaps, cotton will contribute to the world's food supply—with an added return to the man who produces it.

Political oratory rolls back and forth, never reaching a conclusion—but in the shop of the engineer, and the laboratory of the chemist, conclusions are reached every day, giving humanity new answers to its daily needs, and adding to the sum total of wealth and happiness.

Arkansas Soil Is Adapted to Fight Against Erosion

Soil Types, Cover Growth Praised by Bennett, Conservation Chief

SOIL EROSION DAY

Rehabilitation of Worn-Out Land Object of Conway State Rally

LITTLE ROCK—Thirty years has not been too long for Dr. Hugh H. Bennett, chief of the government soil conservation service, to wait for the realization of his hope for concerted soil-saving work throughout the United States, for the present program promises to fulfill the sweeping purpose sought by pioneers in the movement, he says.

Dr. Bennett returned to Arkansas Wednesday night at one coming back to familiar ground. He has been in the state many times, and has made inspections and recommendations for soil conservation work here before.

On Conway Program

He was to speak Thursday before an audience of 3,000 to 5,000 on the campus of Arkansas State Teachers College at Conway Thursday where Soil Conservation day is being celebrated in conjunction with the state-wide vocational educational conference held there throughout the week.

Arkansas is fortunate in having less serious erosion problems than many other states, he said, since the soil types and available cover growth are favorable in many parts of the state. He cited instances of grave damage from abuse of the land, however, and said that only a continuance of the excellent co-operation given here can insure the permanent improvement needed in many areas.

Soil conservation work, first established as an emergency measure in the Department of the Interior, was transferred this year to the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Bennett, who has been head of the bureau since its beginning, returned to the Agricultural Department to continue in that capacity.

To Salvage the Land

He had been engaged in soil erosion work throughout a long experience in the Department of Agriculture, so long that even he sometimes thought that the public would never awaken to the ultimate disaster that impoverished soil and waste land threatened to bring. A number of soil erosion stations were maintained prior to establishment of the national bureau, and here he learned what to do, as well as how to persuade the farmer what to do to save his land.

Combined efforts of the various agencies under the present administration have speeded the soil-saving work, he said, and the speed with which a $300,000,000 SCS program in 42 states has gone forward is attributed by him largely to the president's interest and determination.

Fine Peaches Sent to Hope Star Staff

A basket of Alberta peaches were presented to members of The Star staff Tuesday by E. M. Floyd, former forward county treasurer. The peaches were as large as grapefruit, Mr. Floyd said that he had a 40-acre orchard of the same variety of peaches.

Two baskets from the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station were sent to The Star by George W. Ware.

Man Found Dead in Railroad Ditch

Believed to Be W. M. Houser, Los Angeles—Possibly Victim of Heat

The body of a man believed to be W. M. Houser, aged about 55, of Los Angeles, Calif., was found in a ditch along the Missouri Pacific right-of-way two miles north of Hope at noon Thursday. There were no marks of violence.

In his clothing was $140 in $20 bills. A railroad ticket purchased at Los Angeles for St. Louis was also found in a bank book bearing the name of W. M. Houser.

The bank book showed a balance of $2,300 deposited in the Bank of America, Los Angeles.

Officers theorized that the man, probably dearranged, had gotten off a passenger train here and wandered up the tracks. A section crew of the Missouri Pacific railroad reported seeing a man answering his description at the railroad viaduct a mile north of town at 7:30 a. m. Thursday.

A second theory of officers was that the man suffered a heat stroke and fell into the ditch. Evidence on the banks of the ditch showed that he had attempted to climb out.

A fireman on a Missouri Pacific train discovered the body and reported to officers here. The victim was brought to Hope Furniture company undertaking parlors. An inquest was being held at 3:30 p. m. Thursday.

Missouri Pacific Refunding Planned

But VanSweringens' Proposal Is Opposed by the Bondholders

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Reorganization of the Missouri Pacific railroad system was proposed to the Interstate Commerce Commission Wednesday on a basis which would reduce from 49 to 36 per cent the stock holdings of the Alleghany Corporation, a Van Sweringen concern.

The plan, submitted by O. P. Van Sweringen, chairman, on behalf of the Missouri Pacific Board of Directors, contemplates consolidation of the Missouri Pacific with 30 subsidiaries to create a vast network of some 15,000 miles of railroad lines.

It is opposed by a committee for Missouri Pacific refunding bonds headed by John S. Stedman, vice president of the Prudential Life Insurance Company of New York, which has indicated it will file a counter-plan.

A few hours before the Van Sweringen proposition was filed, the independent committee for Missouri Pacific railroad bond holders, assailing railroad financing operations of the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland, appealed to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to "aid investors and not the Van Sweringens" in any plan for reorganization which the latter proposed. The Missouri Pacific has been in the hands of trustees for more than two years.

Refunding Plan Is Approved 103 to 0 by School Voters

Interest Cut From 6 and 5 Per Cent, to 4 Under Refunding Issue

DATE BONDS AUG. 1

Local District Escapes Receivership—Gets Easier Payments

Voters of the Hope Special School District approved the school board's refunding agreement by a vote of 103 to 0 in the election Wednesday afternoon at Hope city hall.

Under the plan seven mills of the 18-mill tax will be segregated for refunding of the bonded debt at a lower rate of interest.

Action of the voters Wednesday was said to have averted throwing the school district into federal receivership.

Had the voters turned down the school board's plan the district would have been compelled to meet the original bond and interest requirement—losing the advantage of easier principal payments and a lower interest rate.

The plan approved by the voters is to refund all the outstanding bonded indebtedness of the district in one refunding issue, to be dated August 1, 1935, bearing interest from date until paid at the rate of 4 per cent per annum.

This plan cuts interest rates on some bond issues from 5 to 4 per cent and on others from 6 to 4 per cent.

There will be no increase in taxation as the result of the election. The total district tax cannot exceed 18 mills under the state constitution. After the seven mills is set aside, the school board will operate the schools on the remaining 11 mills.

The unpaid bonded indebtedness of the district is now $229,972.00. Of this amount, approximately $15,000 is past due. The district also owes about $15,000 interest on this bonded indebtedness.

$165,718 Paid Here Through the AAA

Agent Stanley Summarizes Cotton Benefits Over Past Year

Rental and benefit payments totaling $165,718.87 have been disbursed to farmers of Hempstead county by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration during the period July 1, 1934, to May 31, 1935, according to Frank R. Stanley, county agent.

The largest income to farmers of this county from a single crop was from cotton, which brought them AAA rental and benefit payments totaling $164,822.54.

Rental and benefit payments by commodities paid to participating farmers in the county follow: Cotton, $164,822.54; corn-hog, $896.33. County Agent Stanley explained that a total of $4,948.99 had been paid to farmers who pooled surplus tax-exemption certificates with the national pool in Washington.

Mr. Stanley pointed out the influence the adjustment program had exerted on the price of cotton for example. He explained that the average price paid for cotton in Arkansas in 1932 was 6.1 cents per pound. From that price it went to 9.3 cents per pound in 1933 and last year the average price paid for cotton in the state was 12.5 cents.

Despite the fact that each year's crop has been smaller than the 1932 crop, the total income from cotton in the state has steadily increased from $40,474,000 in 1932 without adjustment programs to $65,973,000 in 1934 with the aid of the government's program.

A total of 2,790 farmers of the county have signed cotton acreage reduction contracts for this year and are participating in the program, while there are 16 farmers co-operating in the corn-hog program and 16 have signed corn-hog contracts.

97½ Thursday Is Third Hottest Day

But Mercury Fails to Touch Peak of 100 Established July 8

At 2 p. m. Thursday the federal thermometer at the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment station touched 97½ degrees for the third hottest day this year.

Official reading for Wednesday was 99 degrees. Records showed that July 8 was the hottest day thus far, the mercury reaching 100 degrees on that day.

The minimum reading Wednesday night was 75.

By the Associated Press

The death toll from heat in the Midwest mounted beyond 100 Thursday with little relief in prospect. Thermometers over a wide area hit new seasonal high marks Wednesday. Hot winds blew across sun-baked plains. Crops suffered.

The toll in 11 Central states from the current heat wave reached approximately 50. Heat two weeks ago caused upwards of 60 deaths.

Fatalities by states, where figures were available, for the summer: Wisconsin, 6; Minnesota, 13; South Dakota, 6; Nebraska, 19; Oklahoma, 18; Illinois, 8, seven of them in Chicago; Kansas, 9; Missouri, 8; Texas, 10; Iowa, 4; Arkansas, 3.

Kansas remained a super-heated spot. The mercury climbed to 106 at Topeka, a new record. Lincoln, Neb., had 105. Pierre, S. D., where the past four weeks has been the hottest on record, sweltered under a maximum of 101.

Two were overcome at St. Louis as the mercury climbed to 95. At Carbondale, Ill., the top was 102.5 degrees. Oklahoma City sizzled again. Kansas City looked vainly for relief with an unofficial 103.

Minnesota generally was slightly cooler. Showers brought slight relief in northern Nebraska but no sustained cooling-off. Chicago had heavy rains that held temperatures down but showers failed to check the mercury's rise materially in southeastern South Dajota.

Hunt Figures Huey Could Carry Four Southern States

One Observer Predicts Kingfish Can Smash Senator Robinson

LOUISIANA'S STORY

Men of Property Terrified —But the Poor See Hope in Dictator

What does the South think of the Kingfish who looms large in its midst? To find out, Frazier Hunt talked, literally, to the men in the street, and he records what they had to say in the following article—the tenth of twelve written exclusively for this is one of the many sections of the country which noted Correspondend Hunt has visited, "Listening to America"—and impartially reporting what he hears.

By FRAZIER HUNT

(Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

Crossing from Arkansas into Hueyland I stopped at a combined gas station, pool hall and checker-playing headquarters in a sleepy village just six miles north of the Louisiana line. The proprietor was heavy- set man of about 55, who sported a walrus mustache and a pair of bright blue eyes.

Frazier Hunt

"If Huey Long runs on a third ticket he'll carry the whole south," he said with great finality. "Don't know why it is but folks just six miles below here are better off'n we are up here in Arkansas. An' as soon as you get twenty miles on south there's two dollars fer every one we got here."

I mentioned Roosevelt. He shook his head. "He ain't near as popular here as he was six months ago. Say, we got some men here who been on relief fer two years. They ain't done a lick of work and they'd laugh in yer face if you offered them a job. Why, small farmers here can't get their crops in 'cause they can't get men to help 'em."

In Long's Home City

I hit it for Huey's home city. That's Shreveport. It was from this community of 80,000 that he first ran for governor and started on his spectacular career. I wanted to find out what the folks back home had to say about their most distinguished citizen—the home-town boy who had gone to the big city and made good.

"We don't care to own him at all," a business man, who said he'd just as soon as not I wouldn't use his name, told me. "There's nothing less than a reign of terror all over the state. He's had himself appointed special attorney for the Tax Commission, and it gives him a diabolical power. He can coerce wealth and force business into line by this threat of tax revision and fines. No man in the United States ever held such power. He's a dictator of the first order. He owns the state, the governor, the legislature, and even the Supreme Court. He's got the state well in hand, and he can make us squeal anytime he wants to."

Down the street I talked with a clerk in a tobacco store. I waited until all the other customers were gone before I opened the subject.

"Don't let these rich guys fool you," he said. "Huey's done wonders for the common people in the state. He's built us schools and furnished free text books. He gave us hundreds of miles of good roads. He's given the little fellow the first real chance he's ever had in the South. It's the mothcaten so-called Southern aristocracy that's down on him. I'd sure like to see him President. I don't care if they do call him Dictator."

Opposing Views

The managing-editor of Shreveport's most influential paper was the next man I struck. "This was Huey's home town for twelve years, and he was never anything but unpopular here. We know him inside and out. We

Speedy Military Plane Lost at Sea

Ship With Top Speed of 325 MPH Vanishes on Its Test Flight

LOS ANGELES, Calif.— (AP) —Two circles of fresh oil three-quarters of a mile offshore provided an ominous clue Wednesday night in the mysterious disappearance of a speedy new army pursuit plane.

The oil spots, south of the Point Vincent fairhbrupse, heightened fears of Lieut. William Van Dusen, leader of the extensive aerial search, that the low-winged craft had plunged into the ocean. The plane, piloted by Lieut. Arthur H. Skaer Jr., disappeared Tuesday during a test flight.

Coast Guard boats were sent to the site to look for wreckage.

The plane, built by the Northrup Corporation, had a top speed of 325 miles an hour, making it possibly the fastest military aircraft in the world. Considerable secrecy shrouded its development and testing.

The plane that Lieutenant Skaer took aloft early Tuesday afternoon on a scheduled test flight of only a few hours represented a startling advance in military aircraft. It was designed to fly at its top speed only 200 feet off the ground, enabling it to pour a withering machine gun fire below. The plane had a capacity of three men, two of whom would be gunners to man the nine machine guns. The landing speed was 200 miles an hour.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A showdown on President Roosevelt's requested abolition of "unnecessary" holding companies was assured Thursday when Representative Rayburn, Texas Democrat, said he would ask the house to concur in the senate bill provision embodying the president's ideas.

Rayburn, one of the house conferees who has been in deadlock with the senate conferees on the bill, said he would move Thursday that the house instruct its representatives to accept Section 11 of the senate bill.

This section calls for abolition as advocated by Roosevelt.

The house had favored regulation by the Securities Commission.

Liverpool reported a minor advance in a reflection of Wednesday's strength of domestic markets.

The first of the annual statistics to appear showed that the 2,500,000 bale decline in exports apparent early in the season had continued until the end of the 1933-34 cotton year.

According to the annual statistics of the New Orleans cotton exchange, world's consumption of American cotton for the year ending July 31 was 11,325,000 bales compared with 13,537,000 bales last season. ## YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Care of Skin Varies, As It Is Dry Or Oily

The kind of treatment you should give your skin depends on the kind of skin that it is.

If the skin is oily, it requires a totally different method of cleaning from one that tends to be dry.

An oily skin can be dried easily by exposeure to alkaline substances. If, however, a worker with an oily skin happens to be a garage mechanic or a locomotive oiler, his occupation will tend to increase the oiliness of his skin and he will have a more difficult problem to keep dry.

On the other hand, there are people who have dry scaly skin resembling that of a fish. The condition is called ichthyosis, from the word meaning fish. Their problem is to prevent their bod ysurface from becoming too dry. body surface from becoming too dryingly delicate, dry and thin, and the same care usually is given to the skin of a baby that ought to be given to the skin of people who are very old.

The skin of a baby should be oiled at least once daily, preferably with a pure olive oil. This is given to the child as a cleansing bath.

Later, as the baby grows older, it may be washed with a colloid solution, like barley water, and finally mild soap and water may be used. The soap should be the kind that is superfatted, like an olive oil castile soap.

People with oily skins ought to bathe more frequently than those with dry skins, and they may require an alkaline or strong soap.

If the skin responds badly to too much water, a bath may be given to those surfaces that are in contact and that chafe easily, thereafter powdering freely.

More people ask about the danger of wetting the hair frequently than about bathing the body. Some think that water rots the hair or causes splitting of the ends.

Actually the scalp is more oily than the skin covering the rest of the body. Because it contains oil, it ends to collect dust or other substances that fly around.

Therefore, the scalp realy requires cleaning more often than most of the rest of the body. Daily washing of the hair is not harmful. However, care should be taken in picking the right soap for the purpose.

If the skin is dry and the scalp also, an oily soap may be used. The hair is moistened, then a thick lather is worked up. The lather then should be rinsed off immediately, and most of the oil will come with the water used for rinsing.

How Men Go Insane in Arctic Darkness.

When Admiral Byrd banished himself to complete solitude in a hut down near the South Pole last year, it was reported that he chose to go alone because he knew that two people cooped up in such isolation would inevitably quarrel bitterly long before their vigil was ended.

One is reminded of this by "Arctic SOS," a new novel by Joseph M. Velter. This book tells about a radio station maintained far up in the Arctic by the Russian government, in which what Admiral Byrd feared actually came to pass—the men who ran the place found themselves utterly unable to get along with one another.

There were three men at this station—a meteorolgist, a radio operator, and a he-man who hunted game to keep the larder stocked. During the Arctic summer they got on well enough together; but when winter came, and the sun disappeared, and the long night set in, all of the men went haywire.

The radio operator went off his base in the most gruesome way. He found the frozen corpse of an Eskimo girl in the Arctic sea, hid it in a frozen ice cavern, and sneaked away from the job to gloat over it in the frozen darkness—until at last he capped losing his mind by losing his life as well.

Then the hunter went balmy and fell in love with an imaginary woman whom the meteorologist was writing about in a novel. For weeks the two men lived at swords' points, trying to kill each other and failing only by chance.

But at last, when spring came again, they regained their sanity—and feeling that they had lived through the worst they struck hands and agreed to stick it out together through one more winter.

It all makes a creepy and interesting book. Published by Harpers. it sells for $2.

"Billy," called Mrs. Brown, "will you please run an errand for me? I'm not dressed and I ned some salad dressing right away."

"Sure," said Billy, "I'll go. What kind do you want?"

A little later Mrs. Smith, a neighbor, asked, "Billy, will you hunt Foster for me? He's not in sight and I'm worried. Tell hi mto come right home."

Billy trudged about in the sun looking for the absent child. He covered about three blocks, and counting yards and houses it really was about ten. At last he produced the wanderer, and by using guile plus force got the three-year-old home. Mrs. Smith was so relieved that she didn't thank Billy. She just took Foster by the ear and led him inside for the inevitable.

"Where on earth have you been?" queried Billy's mother sharply. "We haven't bite of bread in the house. Hurry now and get it. And take this bacon back. Tell Mr. Miller I want it thin."

"He's always mean when I take things back. You call him up and explain, won't you, mom?"

Passing the Buck to Billy

"I don't want his growling. Just run along now and do as I say."

After lunch, Tom, Billy's brother, was told to scrub the garage. "Say," he protested, "isn't Bill big enough to do that now? He hasn't an earthly thing to do all day, and I've been busy."

"Ho!" whooped Billy. "Playin' ball. And you're going back to the lot. I heard you say, 'All right, fellows, I'll be back after lunch.'"

"Smart, aren't you? Well, what have you been doing? Loafing all morning. It's time you grew up and helped around here."

"I have not been loafing," insisted the little fellow.

"What did you do?"

Billy screfed up his face. He couldn't exactly remember, for living by the minute, as small children do, the distant past of an hour ago seldom lives to face them, or defend them.

"Yes," his mother took up the battle, "you scrub the garage, Bill. And when you are through, daddy wants those white pants pressed. Tell the tailor to hurry them up."

Legs Versus Memory

Billy had been right past the tailor when he went for bread, but it is easier to use small legs that don't belong to you than to stretch the brain centers of memory.

By night Billy was as cranky as a crow. He fought and cried by spells. He didn't know himself what was wrong with him, but he couldn't help it. He was mad at everything and everybody.

"You ought to be ashamed," said mother. "If you can't be happy now, you never will be. Just wait till you grow up and have some real troubles. Here comes Mrs. Gordon. Now be sure you don't sit down as long as she's standing."

Mrs. Gordon stayed half an hour. Billy tried to sneak off, but Mrs. Gordon had come to see about Billy's music, so he had to stay. She wouldn't sit down for she was saying she had to go.

As she finally left, she smiled and patted the boy. "Childhood is such a happ time," she sighed. "I wish I could live mine over again." But she knew very well that she wouldn't.

SUN-TAN

By Nard Jones

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JO DARIEN, finishing her first year in college, learns her father is out of work. Jo hunts a job and secures part time work in a marine supply store. There she meets wealthy, handsome DOUGLAS MARSH who offers her the job of hostess at his inn at Crest Lake. Jo accepts. This causes a quarrel with BRET PAUL, to whom she is engaged and Jo breaks the engagement.

She goes to Crest Lake. Her duties are pleasant but Marsh's eccentric mother takes a dislike to the girl. BABS MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance who is jealous of Jo's popularity, comes to the inn. PETER FRAGONET film actor, and his wife are also guests.

Fragonet takes Jo out in a sailboat. There is an accident and she narrowly escapes drowning. Next day Fragonet comes to see her. He tells Jo he loves her, takes her in his arms. MRS. FRAGONET and MRS. MARSH witness this scene and accuse Jo of encouraging Fragonet's attentions.

Fragonet goes to Hollywood, promising to return soon. Jo discovers that Bret Paul is the next life guard at Crest Lake. She and Bret have a talk, but the rift between them remains.

Jo, on her way to the inn, encounters Marsh.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII

"WELL," smiled Marsh, "it's nice to see you able to be about, Jo—and you're looking remarkably fit, too."

Jo held out her hand. "You've no idea how nice it is," she laughed. "I'm afraid I've been a great deal more trouble than you bargained for."

"Nonsense! These things will happen sometimes."

"I don't mean . . . just the accident out on the lake," Jo said, her voice serious now.

He met her eyes squarely for a moment. "Look here, Jo, let's have a little talk about things, shall we?" He rubbed his chin uncomfortably. "I want to rid myself of this hunting beard, and you'll want to change, no doubt. Suppose we meet down by the garage in half an hour or so?"

Jo nodded, relieved that she was to know where Marsh stood. And perhaps he could help her, too, with Fragonet. If she stayed on at Crest Lake until the actor returned there might be further awkward situations, Jo well knew.

When she reached her rooms she telephoned Tubby that the tennis game was off "The boss wants a conference with me," she told Tubby lightly, "so I'll postpone my challenge until tomorrow—if I'm still here."

"That's all right with me," Tubby said. "And don't worry. You'll be here, all right."

Marsh was running his car from the garage just as Jo appeared, having changed her swim suit for a gay cotton print that revealed her lovely tanned shoulders and not a little of her enviable back.

"Sure you won't need a wrap?" Marsh asked. "It gets rather cool along these forest roads, and I thought we might have dinner at the Lone Tree Tavern. It'll be a welcome change for you, after being cooped up in your room for so long."

"Well . . ." Jo hesitated, thinking of the thin cotton frock. "I'll drive by the steps of the Inn and have Tom bring you something. I've a leather jacket that'll be just the thing."

A TOOT from Marsh's horn brought the smiling Oriental who was quickly despatched for the leather jacket, and half a minute later the little green roadster was climbing valiantly toward the knoll above the inn.

Marsh drove in silence, and Jo wondered how to begin the questions which were tossing around in her head. Finally, to her immense relief, Marsh himself asked a question which opened the subject that was worrying her most.

"Did Pete Fragonet bother you while I was gone?" he asked.

Marsh chuckled reminiscently. "He promised me he wouldn't try to see you. But I had to promise, too!" He turned to her, smiling. "He seems really to be in love with you, Jo."

"He imagines that he is," she replied, "and for the time being that makes it just as difficult as if he were."

"Then you don't love him?" Marsh asked.

"No . . ."

He was silent a moment, and when he spoke again his voice was freighted with relief. "You don't know how glad I am to hear you say that, Jo. Pete Fragonet is a friend of mine. I've liked him very much—but he's like a great spoiled child, and a spoiled child can hurt."

"You mean you wouldn't quite trust him?"

"Not with a woman's happiness," Marsh said quietly. "And yet I shouldn't say that about a friend. Perhaps, this time, Pete is on the level. Why shouldn't you be the one woman he'd fall in love with and want to keep forever? You're young and beautiful, and you—"

• • •

JO interrupted, embarrassed by Marsh's words, "Talking of Fragonet brings up the whole question of whether or not I should stay on here, Mr. Marsh."

"Of course you should stay. Why not?"

"I've caused trouble—and talk."

"Let 'em talk," Marsh said. "And if I hear any of it myself I'll put them right side up in a devil of a hurry."

"But I don't think we've heard the end of it," Jo said. "Mrs. Fragonet is likely to make trouble, and with Fragonet so well known there are sure to be stories in the newspapers."

"We'll hope for the best, Jo."

"But . . . it would be awfully bad for the name of Crest Lake."

Marsh laughed. "If I were running a strictly commercial enterprise I might worry about that. But I'm doing this for fun mainly, and most of the people who come here are my friends. If they're real friends it won't matter how much scandal Fragonet stirs up."

"But—" Jo faltered, "there's always the chance that—that your name might get mixed up some way."

He turned to her with a wide grin. "I remember one thing my father told me when I was just a little kid. He said that if I had any brains and was able to keep what he left me people would be sure to talk about me whenever they got the chance. He said not to worry about it, because if I didn't get into a scandal then people would eventually manufacture one about me."

"I don't think your mother believes that," Jo remarked mischievously.

"You're right. Mother didn't believe very much of anything that Dad said."

"Don't you really think it would be better for me to leave before Fragonet comes back with the picture company?" Jo asked.

"I do not," Marsh answered quickly. "I'll wire them they can't make scenes on my place before I'll see you leave on that account. And I'll tell you this, Jo There's no use trying to run away from Pete Fragonet. You've got to face him and tell him you don't love him and never could love him."

"That's hard to do," Jo said. "I —somehow I sort of feel sorry for him."

Marsh nodded. "That's what Pete does to women, all right. He brings out the mother instinct in 'em. I suppose that's why he's so darned popular on the screen."

"You can make fun of me if you want, but that's the way I feel."

• • •

HE turned quickly. "I'm not making fun of you, Jo. I'm just trying to warn you that Pete Fragonet has a lot of charm. And I don't want to see you hurt, that's all." He stopped, the car, began fishing in his pockets for cigarets. After considerable searching he found a lone cigaret, somewhat flattened but still capable of giving a smoke. Laughing, he snapped it in two and inserted one of the halves between Jo's lips.

"Let's forget Fragonet," he said, holding a light for her. "There are a lot of things more important to us right now."

"For instance?"

"Well," Marsh went on, starting the car, "we're darned near out of cigarets. It's a beautiful day, and we're both young enough to enjoy it. We're getting just a little bit hungry and it's 12 miles to the Lone Tree Tavern." He met Jo's eyes humorously. "All those things, or any one of them, are more important right now than Fragonet. Don't you agree?"

"Yes, I do," Jo laughed. It was fun to be with Marsh again, and she was reminded of their evening together at the Olympic Bowl, and of their first few days at Crest Lake when Marsh was conscientiously showing her the place.

"Another thing that's important right now," Marsh went on lightly, "is that you're so darned beautiful and so close to me that I want to kiss you. Does that strike you as important?"

"Well," Jo said, "you make it sound rather important."

"Important enough to act upon?" he asked.

Jo was puzzled. If Marsh wanted to kiss her for the simple light-hearted reasons he had given, then Jo saw no reason to be a prude. But if his lightness was only the mask behind which he wanted to proceed toward a relationship which would be cheap and common and insincere, then—

"Important enough to act upon?" Marsh repeated.

"Possibly," said Jo.

"Then if you leave it to my judgment entirely—" He did not finish. He brought the car to a lurching stop, took Jo Darien in his arms and kissed her so firmly and definitely that she gasped for breath.

Creams Aid Beauty on Vacation

The new beauty preparations, displayed on cosmetic counters everywhere attractively enough to make you forget the heat, include fascinating items that can be used with as little effort as you like to exert these blistering days and several that would be amusing to take along and try during your leisure time on vacation.

A new cream, for instance, made primarily to heal bad cases of sunburn, and which turns out to be just the thing to use on annoying little pimples and blemishes, takes effect quite quickly. If you have been silly enough to sit in the sun long enough to become blistered, simply apply the cream and leave it on seven or eight hours.

A cleansing and tissue cream set—not new, but certainly improved—is ideal for hot weather home facials. The cleansing cream is an oily rather than a greasy preparation, removes every trace of dirt from the skin and is easy to wipe off. The issue cream is of slightly heavier consistency, of course, but it's still light enough to be pleasant to use in summer-time. You can leave a bit of it on all night without feeling uncomfortably warm.

There's a new lotion that should be a personal boon to any woman with a nose or forehead that persists in becoming shiny a few minutes after she has powdered. After powdering lightly, you pat a bit of the colorless liquid on nose and across forehead. Before it is quite dry, apply another coat of powder.

NEXT: Flowers for Madame.

For the cheerful grin will let you in
Where the "knocker" is never know.
Growl, and the way looks dreary;
Laugh and the path is bright;
For a welcome smile brings sunshine, while
A frown shuts out the light.
Sigh, and you "rake in" nothing;
Work, and the prize is won;
For the nervy man with backbone can
By nothing be outdone.

The man whom police are seeking in belief that he can throw some light on the murder is Manville Zenge, 26, of Canton, Mo. He was a childhood sweetheart of Mrs. Bauer and was engaged to her for two years until she broke off the engagement three months ago according to friends. Zenge had told members of his family that he intended to come to Chicago, when he quit his job as a carpenter on the construction of a dam across the Mississippi river at Canton, a week ago.

Heavy Demand for Gulf Economy Book

"15 Ways to Save Gasoline Money" Distributed Free

It has been a regular service of The Star to restore lost dogs, watches, wallets and whatnots to anxious owners. But today our attention is called to the fact that we have helped find something which the owners did not know they had lost.

"Thanks to The Star," says M. S. Bates, local representative of the Gulf Refining company, "a multitude of motorists have found that they have been losing gallons of good gasoline without realizing it—just as surely as if there were a leak in the gasoline tank!"

Mr. Bates refers to the result of a series of advertisements recently placed in The Star by his company, offering all motorists the new free booklet, "15 Ways to Save Gasoline Money."

"Soon after the offer appeared in your paper, motorists began to flock to our filling-stations to claim their copies of the booklet, and the original supply had to be renewed.

Among the 15 simple, money-saving hints illustrated in the attractive little Gulf booklet is a pertinent pointer on parking. It explains, to the surprise of most motorists, that a car figuratively "burns up gas" even when it is parked, depending upon where and how you park it. Other hints in the booklet that materially increase mileage-per-gallon deal with proper use of the self-starter, accelerator; gear shifting and other ordinary operations in driving, any one of which wastes quantities of gasoline, if carelessly done.

Titled "15 Ways to Save Gasoline Money," the booklet is free for the asking at all Gulf service stations and dealers'.

Russian Sub Sinks With Loss of 55

B-3 Goes Down in Finland Bay After Collision on Surface

MOSCOW, Russia—(AP)—A brief official announcement early Thursday disclosed the death of 55 Russian seamen, some of them young cadets, in the sinking of the submarine B-3 in Finland bay a week ago. It was the worst disaster to the Russian fleet in years.

The submarine, participating in the current Baltic fleet maneuvers, came up from an underwater cruise and collided with an unidentified surface vessel. A gaping hole was torn in her hulk and she sank immediately. All aboard her—officers, seamen and naval school students—perished.

The submarine was of the old "Bars" type built in 1917, toward the end of Russia's participation in the World war. Measures have been taken to raise the hulk, the Tass (official) news agency reported.

A mass funeral will take place at Kronstadt. The government will distribute sums of 10,000 rubles to families of the victims. Pensions also will be paid, it was announced.

The communique which gave the first news of the tragedy merely said that all occupants had perished, without revealing whether any had managed to stave off death for a time by closing themselves in the air-tight compartments. It was indicated that the bodies either had been recovered or were expected to be recovered.

Students from naval schools both at Kronstadt and Leningrad had been participating in the fleet maneuvers.

Germany Nervous in Economic Crisis

Fear Outbreak Following Persecution and Rise in Food Prices

By the Associated Press

BERLIN—Nazis, facing economic crisis, are seen attacking "state enemies" to forestall revolt within party ranks; price increases stir discontent; Jews warned to stay out of Berlin.

FORBACH, France—Anti-Semitic agitation spreads to Saar basin; 30 young Jews chased out of Saarbrucken public baths.

WASHINGTON—State Dpartment to send formal answer to Germany's protest against "Bremen incident" to German embassy Thursday.

NEW YORK—Mayor La Guardia draws German-American fire as "inciter of race hatred," praise from Jews; heavy police guards assgned to land sailing Wednesday night.

Berlin Fears Trouble

BERLIN—Extraordinary police precautions against possible trouble were instituted in Berlin Wednesday night shortly after impartial foreign observers said they believed Nazi Germany's economic crisis lay behind the Reich's vigorous offensives against "state enemies."

Count von Helldorf, Berlin's new police president, instructed his men to hold themselves ready for eventualities all this week, though the capital outwardly was normal.

Earlier, reliable sources said Storm Troops and members of the party's "political organization" also had been ordered to keep themselves in readiness.

That economic difficulties play an important part in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's decision was indicated by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economies, who said in an address in connecton with the unveiling of a bust of Hitler in the Reichsbank vestibule:

"We have no thought of sticking our head in the sand in the face of such tremendous difficulties—on the contrary."

Unbiased foreign observers, taking cognizance of the economic crisis, believed that the anti-reactionary drive was designed possibly to forestall opposition within the ranks of Hitler's followers.

Malcontents over the economic situation are housekeepers, tradesmen and underpaid workmen, disturbed by food prices which average, in the case of meat, 40 per cent higher than six months ago.

Steel Earnings Up for Second Quarter

Profit of 14 Million, Against 12½ Million One Year Ago

Insull to Regain Company Pension

Sentiment Swings Toward Him Following Court Acquittal

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Samuel Insull, reported to be financially dependent upon his son, Samuel Jr., may regain his $21,000 annual utilities pension, it was rumored Tuesday in Chicago's financial district.

Each of three companies, the Keystones in the former Insull "empire", voted him $6,000 annual annuities when he resigned as chairman of their boards; Commonwealth Edison Company, People Gas, Light and Coke Company, and Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. Peoples Gas Subsidary Corporation, an offshoot of People Gas, awarded him an additional $3,000.

Insull went to Europe and later took sanctuary in Greece, fighting extradition to face trial in Chicago, objections were raised to his remaining on the pension roll. He was removed early last year. With all the criminal charges against him disposed of and the white-haired Insull victor in all tilts with the courts, sentiment is veering in his favor, rumor has it.

Death Verdict for Woman's Slayer

Jury Out Four Hours in Thompson Trial at Peoria, Ill.

PEORIA, Ill.—(AP)—Death in the electric chair was voted by a jury after deliberating just short of four hours Wednesday night on the guilt of Gerald Thompson, 26, confessed slayer and rapist of pretty Mildred Hallmark.

The jury retired after hearing an eloquent plea by State's Attorney E. V. Champion for the death penalty. Judge Joseph E. Daily read his instructions, in which the jurors were given a broad definition of insanity, regarded as favorable to the contention of Ren Thurman, court-appointed defense lawyer, that the young adventurer in sex was criminally insane.

The jury was given forms of verdict: Not guilty; not guilty by reason of insanity; not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime although now sane; guilty of murder, fixing the punishment at death; guilty of murder, fixing the punishment at life imprisonment or any period of years over 14 years and guilty of manslaughter, fixing the punishment at from one to 14 years' imprisonment.

Thompson was led from the court, while the jurors were locked up in an anteroom. Thompson's return to the county jail across the street from the courthouse was marked by boos and cat calls from the throng that jammed the square.

3 Men–1 For

don't want him now, and we never did want him, but I don't know what we can do about it. He has a machine now built around 30,000 office holders. Why, every school teacher and policeman and fireman and every state, parish and city employe must hold a commission straight from the governor —which means Huey. He controls the entire machinery of government, the election board included. And at the last session of his legislature he had a bill passed doing away with the poll tax. That lets all the poor in the state vote for him. All the people with property are intimidated."

Twenty miles west, near the Texas line, I talked to three men in a gas station and garage. A tall, windy young fellow who sold gas bubbled over at the very mention of Huey. "He could be elected hands down if he'd run for President," he predicted confidentially. "Most everybody out here is for him, and I've heard that he's even stronger in the East."

I turned to the other two. One was a well-dressed man about 30; the second was a tall countryman. The well dressed man made no comment. The countryman said: "No denying he's done a lot of things for the state."

When I asked who was going to pay for them, he grinned and answered: "I don't know. Reckon not the poor folks."

"Is Huey a dictator?" I questioned.

The windy gas man popped in his answer. "What's the difference? Maybe that's the way to get things done."

The tall man in overalls grinned. The third man said nothing.

When I paid for my gas and drove on it occurred to me that the group probably pretty accurately represented the sentiment over the state; one was violently for Huey; one took him without a struggle; the third was intimidated.

Roosevelt Is Strong

In Dallas the city editor of a newspaper said to me: "Huey couldn't carry 10 per cent of the people of Texas. Roosevelt is still strong as mustard. When Huey was talking some of invading this state a group of men came into the office and wanted to know what wouldhappen if they rotten-egged Huey. That tells their sentiment."

From a wise and disinterested observer of the south I got this general summary: "Long can carry at least four southern states. He can defeat Joe Robinson if he goes after him. He has even the opposition in New Orleans crushed. . . . He probably will not run in 1936. He will try to capture as many state delegations as possible and make a lot of noise at the Democratic convention, but he'll not actually launch his third party next year. He'll wait until 1940, and then if he gets in we'll get a real taste of a Fascist dictatorship."

Then this same student of men and government went on: "Throughout the South there is a steadily increasing breakdown in county governments. So few taxes have been collected that county officials no longer get their safaries. They have turned to the money bags of the great relief agencies to give them jobs, power and dollars. In Arkansas alone there is a shortage of more than $800,000 in county funds whic are really embezzlements. . . . Relief here in the South has been filled with politics and graft. In one mountain district in Tennessee the woman head of county relief was found $14,000 short in her accounts. A man was put in her place, but the coal company which deminated the district brought so much pressure to bear that they had the woman brought back. The first thing she did was to announce that if there was a coal strike no striking miner would get a drop of relief. At least she was grateful."

In the semi-final event, Pat O'Brien, Irish light heavyweight of Waco, Texas, will meet "Wild Bill" Jefferies.

Two four-round boxing matches have been added to the fight card.

Pinkie Carrigan, local negro boxer, appears against Chester Jones, Hope negro, in the opening event. Both negroes are fast.

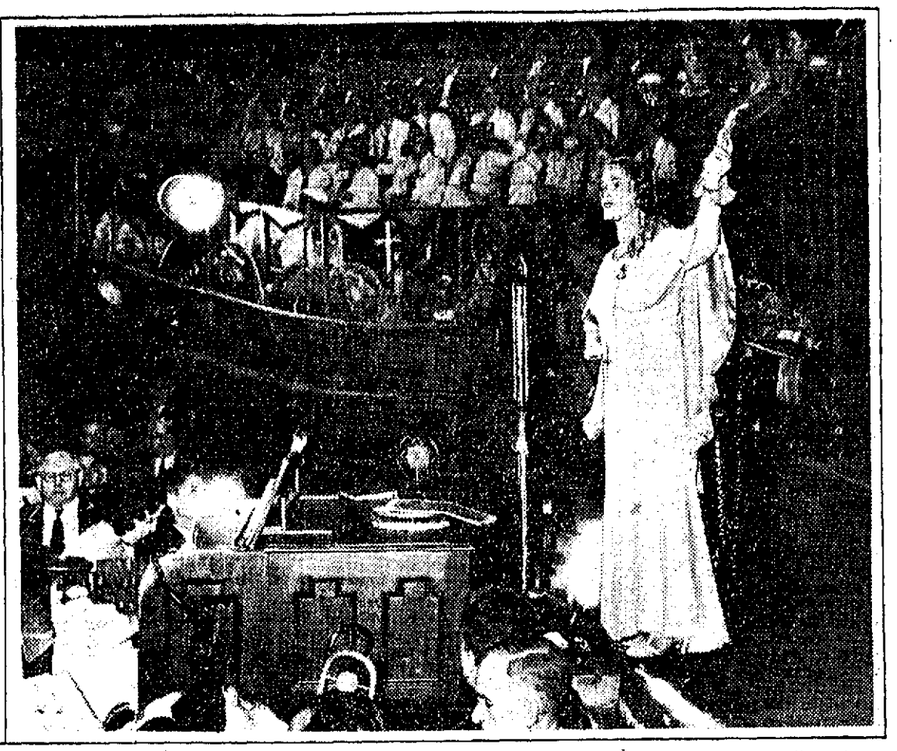
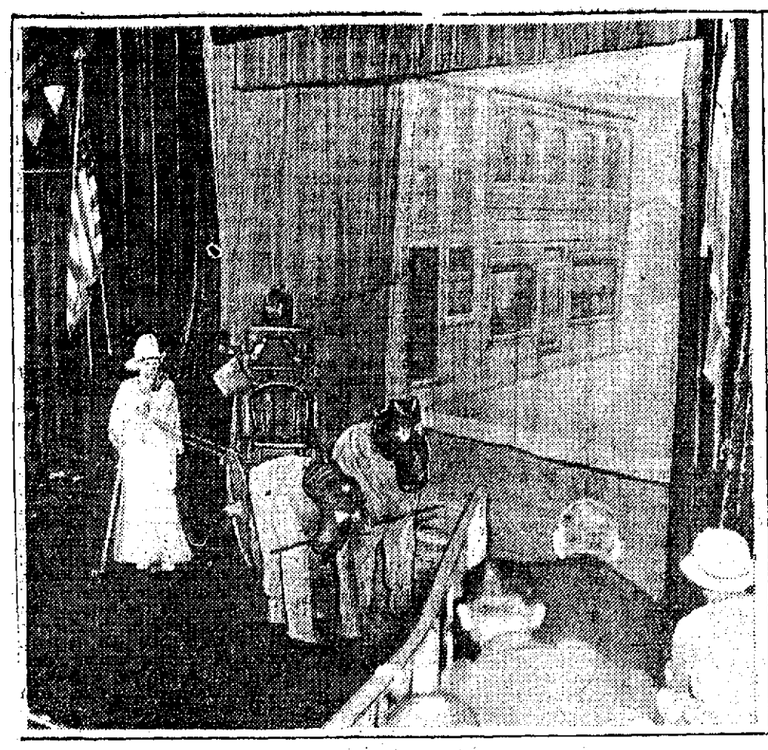
Sister Aimee Still Sparkles; Packs 'Em in Her Temple

Aimee Semple McPhearson is still packing to the rafters her famous Angelus Temple in Los Angeles. This newest portrait shows Aimee costumed for a spectacular illustrated sermon.



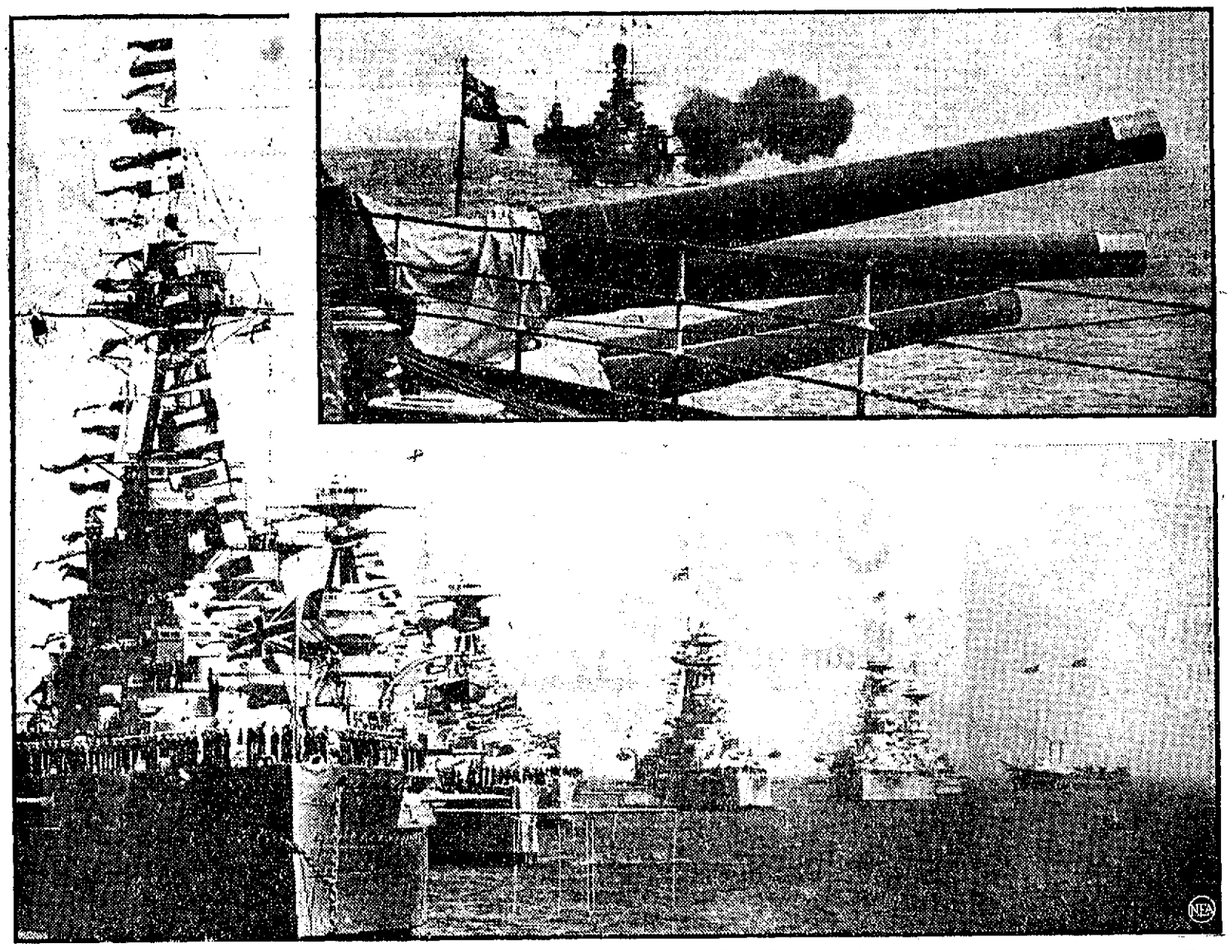
The candid camera is on hand to record its story as spirituals are played and sung by a full-sized orchestra, and a huge chorus (seen in the background, each wearing a fireman's hat). The husky, crooning voice of Aimee herself makes its appeal. Added to the effect of her flowing white robes, inevitable flowers, and dramatic gestures, her voice dominates the hall, lulls the vast crowd into a moaning, muttering state of near-hysteria. That same seductive voice rides the air waves with the message "We are saving souls every Thursday night . . . from 8 until 10 . . ."

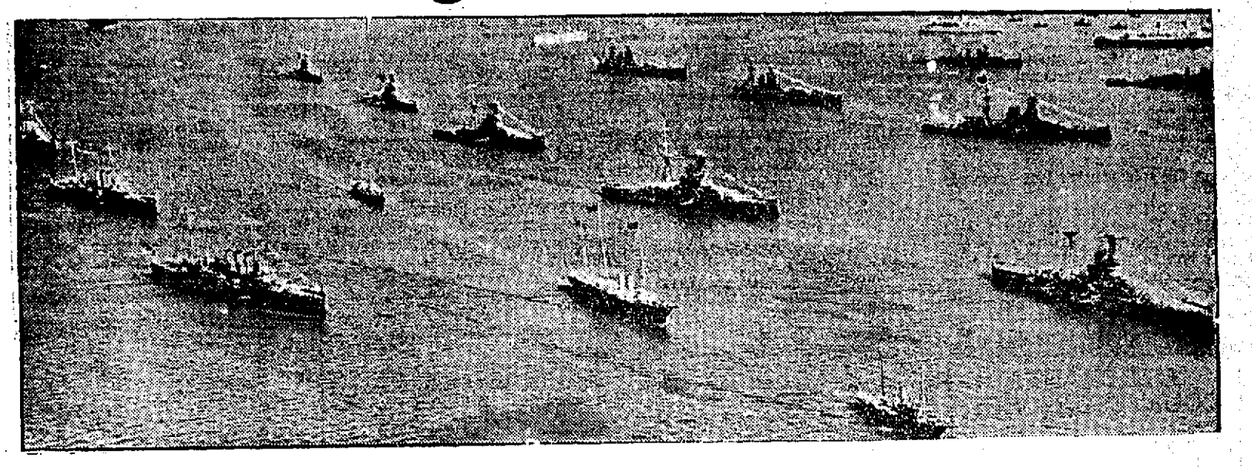


Now comes the climax of the evening . . . a dummy fire wagon drawn by two "stage horses" with lights flashing from their eyes. Backstage is a big fire bell. The crowd gasps in pleasure and amusement, leans forward in its seats. Los Angeles firemen are special guests and an exhibition of fire-prevention work is to be an added feature. But Aimee continues to drive home her gospel points as she strides gracefully along beside the fire wagon.

Now the camera catches Sister Aimee at top from near the close of her sermon. Notice the brilliant light glowing on the flower-decked lectern before her, the diamond cross hanging from her shoulders, her long white skirt and red-lined cape, and fireman's hat.

Parade on Land and Sea Thrills King and Country





With thousands of sailors and officers manning the rails, pennants flying, immaculate hulls and turrets gleaming in the sun, the battleships of Great Britain's fleet presented a picture of power as they floated at anchor during the Silver Jubilee review by King Geoge V, off Spithead, England. The royal yacht "Enchantress" is shown at right steaming past the saluting warships. ABOVE: The huge guns of H. M. S. Renown fire a salvo during maneuvers at sea witnessed by the King.

The far-flung power of Britain's navy is evidenced in the impressive air view (top) of the jubilee review at Spithead, England. The yacht "Enchantress" (center foreground) carries King George V through the monster naval display. BELOW: The British army, in a great review at Aldershot, England, displayed the land forces at his command. Here a company of cavalry turns "eyes right" as it troops in review before the King, who is pointed out by the arrow, standing under a canopy.

Women War With Civic Guards in Irish Outbreak

Religious and political bitterness flamed into violent rioting in northern Ireland after a mammoth Orange celebration in Belfast and here women are shown in a clash with civic guards at Fermoy. Hurling stones at the troopers, they were dispersed only after the guards, shown advancing with drawn clubs, charged them at the entrance to a viaduct where they had taken their stand. Reinforcements were rushed up by auto before the affray could be ended. In the north Ireland outbreak, five were killed and more than 150 injured.

Paris Flames With Riot Over Government Pay Cuts

Long-smoldering rage of thousands of French government employes blazed into violence when decree laws of the Laval cabinet slashed their salaries 10 per cent and led to the most serious rioting in Paris since the Stavisky uprising. Here is shown a furious clash in the streets near the Place de l'Opera, center of the city, where thousands of mobile guards and Gardes Republicaine halted the demonstrators in their rush on the historic square. Horsemen charge the crowd and guards in the foreground are shown rushing away a prisoner.

Sail to Attend Laval Wedding

Drawn abroad to attend the impending marriage in Paris of her cousin, the Count Rene de Chambrun, to Jose Laval, daughter of the French premier, Mrs. Alice Longworth will take her daughter Paulina on a tour of France, England and Switzerland. They are shown as they sailed from New York.

Washington Ships 16 Cars Melons

Price Is 40 to 60 Cents at Start, Declining to 40-20 Cents

Sixteen cars of watermelons had been shipped from Washington to Wednesday, and buyers estimated that the total shipment would reach at least 25 cars.

During the first week of the melon season prices remained steady and exceptionally good, ranging from 40 to 60 cents per hundred pounds. This week, however, the market has been dropping steadily and the melons are now bringing from 20 to 40 cents per hundred pounds depending on size and quality. With favorable weather at least another week of buying is assured.

A large quantity of melons are still being carried from the district by trucks. Truck buyers are paying a little less than the buyers at the cars, but the grower does not have to haul away from his farm.

Several growers sold their crops outright on the vine and made a good profit while the market was at its peak. Most of them, however, preferred to sell after the melons are pulled.

One grower has an inquiry from a man in San Diego, Calif., who wants to buy the largest watermelon grown in Hempstead county this year. This writer states that he bought a 115 pound Hempstead melon last year, and wants a bigger one this year if he can get it. He failed to state what he was willing ho pay for one weighing from 125 to 150 pounds. The big ones, though, usually come pretty high, as only a few growers are able to push them over the 100 pound mark.

Fat Man Reduces 53 Pounds—Oh Boy!

Don't be stubborn, you big fat men —throw off your fat before your fat throws you into the discard. Do as S. A. Lanier of Sawtelle, Calif., did—read this letter:

"I have used two reducing belts to no benefit but since using Kruschen Salts each morning in my coffee I have taken off 7 lbs. in a week and eat most anything I like. I weighed 243 lbs. 6 months ago and now I weigh 190 lbs."

Take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning—cut down on fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—now you know the safe way to lose unsightly fat.

For a trifling sum you can get a bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks at John P. Cox Drug Co. or any drugstore in the world—but be sure and get Kruschen—your health comes first. —adv.

Death Trial Near

Confessed killer of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher after he had lured her to his Detroit apartment, Merton Ward Goodrich, above, will go to trial on July 17 on a charge of first degree murder, after pleading not guilty at his recent arraignment. The wandering musician, captured in New York after nine months' flight, is a former inmate of the Lima, O., hospital for the criminal insane. His wife also is a prisoner.

Germans Angry at Increasing Prices

This, Coupled With Religious Persecutions, Threatens Nazi Chiefs

BERLIN, Germany —(AP)— The German government Wednesday was faced with a serious threat to its much-publicized "national unity" in a wide-spread popular dissatisfaction against price increases.

This dissatisfaction was charged up to Nazi radicals while moderates maneuvered behind the scenes to gain the upper hand concerning a determination of policy as to how severe will be the Nazi drive against political Catholicism, reactionary World war veterans, and other "state enemies."

Nazi hotheads deaf to party orders banning "direct action" against Jew and Catholic "state enemies are hindering Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's efforts to curb extremist tactics in the Third Reich's anti-reactionary drive.

Hitler and his collaborators were reliably reported anxious to halt individual action against asserted reactionaires, this for diplomatic and economic reasons in view of the storm protest created abroad.

However, authoritative quarters said the force of popular passions aroused against "state enemies" was so great that it was difficult to restrain. Reports from the provinces indicated the movement from the provinces indicated the movement, though ebbing, still persisted.

Seven Jews and six Gentile women were jailed in Halle for alleged "violation of racial principles;" the Nurnberg burgomaster decreed that the Nazi flag only be displayed, this though the government also recognized the black-white-and-red imperial flag; the burgomaster of Quedlinburg declared Jews might not enter museums or cathedrals there, and Recklinghausen police announced 10 lay brothers of the congregation of the "Brothers of Mercy" had been arrested for alleged immoral practices.

At Hasslech, Germans demonstrated against Emil Adolf, publisher of the Hasslecher Tabeblatt who, an official version said, "berated the people of the fatherland in shameless fashion." The newspaper was closed indefinitely, and Adolf taken into "protective custody."

British Describe War Gas Horrors

Attention Paid to Deadly New American Lewisite, Poisoning Eye

LONDON, Eng.—The horrors of the next war's gas attacks are vividly foreshadowed in the first of a series of six official handbooks which the newly formed Air Raid Frecautions Department of the Home Office is issuing Wednesday.

Therein are described choking gases, nose gases, tear gases and blistering gases, and their effects in different kinds of weather, their qualities of delayed action, their invisibility in some cases and their effectiveness over long periods.

American Lewisite, which poisons via the eyes and nose, an aircraft's ability to spray an invisible irritant, the victims discovering the damage too late for treatment, and the elaborate precautions necessary to protect the eyes, skin, lungs and even shoes are described fully.

Approximately $13,000,000,600 is spent annually in the United States in taking care of criminals.

Washington Gets U.S. Sewing School

Washington women have the opportunity of attending a government sewing and cooking school which was organized Tuesday at the court house and will continue for two weeks.

Local women have the opportunity of attending a government sewing and cooking school which was organized Tuesday at the court house and will continue for two weeks.

The school is being taught by Mrs. Oelie May Christian of Nashville and is sponsored by the Home Economics department of the state F. E. R. A. This is the first school of its kind to be conducted in Hempstead.

Twelve local women and girls enrolled the first day of the school and all others who are interested anre urged to enroll and take advantage of this free government activity.

Horses Stampede in Stockyard Fire

Race Down Main Street, Hindering Kansas City Fire Department

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)— Fire burned one barn of mules and horses, and raged for an hour in the Kansas City stockyards Wednesday before it was brought under control.

One hundred horses, released from the yards, stampeded down the main traffic artery and hindered the fire trucks.

Eleven states passed laws for the payment of old age pensions during 1933 and 1934. A total of 29 states now have such laws.

Insects which crawl inside the jack-in-the-pulpit flower are never allowed to escape. Their bodies furnish the plant with nourishment.

This country now owns more than $8,195,000,000 in gold, or more than a third of the $21,549,000,000 in gold in the world.

During the deer hunting season of 1934, more than 745 hunters were killed.

"Vomited 3 or 4 Times Every Day"

—18 years with a stomach like that! And in 3 doses of Gordon's:

Wonderful! Think of finding relief in 3 doses, at 3c a dose! Read what she says: "Fo 18 years I suffered with what all said was gall bladder trouble. All but one said nothing but operating would do any good. Got to where I suffered untold agony. Vomited 3 or 4 times every day. Had gas, bloating, sour stomach. Then I tried GORDON'S. In three doses I felt better! By the time I had taken one bottle I felt like a new person. Took two and one-half bottles. Has been over a year now, since I have had to take any GORDON'S. I can eat anything now, and all I want, and it digests. Felt better the past winter than for years. I tell all my friends. I can't recommend it too highly. I am so overjoyed with results." —Mrs. G. W. Henderson, 246 South Schuyler Street Ottumwa, Iowa.
